THE COUNTRY CHILD.
The Country Child has fragrances
He breathes about him as he goes;
Clear eyes that look at distances
And in his cheeks the wilding rose.

The sun, the sun himself will stain
The country face to his own red,
The red gold of the ripening grain,
And bleach to white the curly head.

He rises to the morning lark,
Sleeps with the evening primroses,
Before the curtain of the dark
Lets down its splendor, starred with bees.

He sleeps so sweet without a dream
Under brown cottage eaves and deep,
His window holds one stray moon-
beam,
As though an angel kept his sleep.

He feeds on honest country fare,
Drinks the clear water of the spring,
Green carpets wait him everywhere,
Where he may run, where he may sing.

He hath his country lore by heart,
And what is friend and what is foe,
Hath conned Dame Nature's book
apart,
Her child since he began to grow.

When he is old, when he goes sad,
Hobbling upon a twisted knee,
He keeps somewhat of joys he had
Since an old countryman is he.

He keeps his childhood's innocence,
Though his old head be bleached
to snow,
For get-me-nots still hold his eyes,
And in his cheeks old roses blow.

REGIMENTAL OFFICERS' BALL
AT PICKETT SPRINGS.

"One of the most brilliant affairs of the encampment week was the ball last Friday evening at Pickett Springs by the officers of the Second Regiment. The handsome dress uniforms of the officers and the light, airy dresses of the girls combined to make a scene of unusual beauty," says the Montgomery Advertiser.

The night was all that could be desired, the rain of the previous evening having left the atmosphere delightfully cool.

"The regimental band furnished splendid music for the occasion. The grand march was led by General and Mrs. Bibb Graves. The figures introduced were intricate and beautiful. Among the couples in the march were noted Lieutenant Colonel Carter of Selma and his daughter, a dainty little miss of 5 or 6 years, who attracted much attention by her petite beauty and perfect self-possession.

The dance cards were attractively designed, bearing on the cover a military scene in colors. There were a large number of guests, among whom were: Colonel and Mrs. Charles R. Bricken and Major and Mrs. Carl Seale, and these two lovely women were former Mobile girls. Seale was Miss Mary Morris Clark and Mrs. Bricken was Miss Bessie McDuffie.

Among the others who have visited here and are well known in the galaxy of fair women were Mrs. R. E. F. Neil of Selma; Miss Georgia Saffold, who was present at the "Becky Cunniff" at the last carnival here; Miss Lila Hannon, Miss Florence Davidson, Miss Ethel Tressler, Miss Sarah Warren Wilkerson. Some others mentioned as present were General and Mrs. Robert F. Lyon, Major and Mrs. M. B. Kirkpatrick, Lieutenant Haywood of Birmingham, Lieutenant Davidson, Major Thurston, Lieutenant Shreve, Lieutenant Parrish, Lieutenant Parrish, Lieutenant Gatica, Major Haywood Patterson, Captain John McDuffie, Captain Ray Wilkerson, Captain and Mrs. B. S. Chapman, Lieutenant T. C. Lock, Captain Smith Robbins, Sergeant and Mrs. Garton, Lieutenant Anthony and Mrs. Lewis B. Farley.

LAWN TEA ETIQUETTE.

Lawn teas and garden parties may be practically the same thing, for some times the simple words "Lawn Tea" in one corner of a visiting card may mean a considerable and gayly dressed gathering. But the phrase is generally used for the more modest function, though whenever employed various refreshments outside of tea and bread and butter and some elegance of dress are implied.

For a smart lawn tea to be given in handsome grounds, the invitation should be engraved in black script on large white cards. The invitation is issued in the name of the hostess only, and is worded thus:

MRS. BLANK,

At Home

Wednesday afternoon, July Twenty-fifth, from four until seven o'clock

Lawn Tea. Blythewood, Portchester

Cards sent to persons living far away also contain a line of script or handwriting at the bottom of the card regarding trains, as—

Train leaves station at 8:30 o'clock.

If the entertainment is to be of too modest a nature for such grand invitations, the hostess may write in ink (below her name) on her visiting card the words "Lawn Tea," with the time of the day and hours for the function; and it is proper for the invited person to respond at once with either a gracious acceptance or an even more courteous excuse for not coming.

Whether the scene of a lawn tea is a cottage garden or the splendid grounds of a fine estate, the preparations required of a hostess are essentially the same. The little patch of green or the spreading lawns must be faultlessly mowed, walks sprinkled with fresh gravel and dead leaves and faded blossoms picked from the flower beds. The lower floor of the house is furnished to brilliancy and decorated with flowers; doors and windows are left wide open, and the veranda will be dragged close to the veranda windows, or may even be placed upon the veranda.

Very frequently a lawn tea will be made lively with piano music, which one musical guest after another may contribute. In this event, the instrument will be dragged close to the veranda windows, or may even be placed upon the veranda.

But though music adds much to the gaiety of such outdoor entertainments, it is by no means obligatory, and not uncommonly quite a big affair may be held without it. Neither is it incumbent upon a hostess to provide special entertainment for her guests, though in large grounds there may be equipments for croquet or a platform for dancing. Easy and amiable conversation, delicate and plentiful food, and the smartest day dress one can command are the lawn tea's actual requirements, along with all the spick and span look of things already mentioned.

The various refreshments offered may, upon a small estate be served upon the veranda or in the dining room of the house. But in large grounds there is generally a refreshment tent of gay striped awning a handsomely spread table, and with a portion of the tent screened off for the butler's work. At a small function two maids in black gowns and caps and aprons of ribbon-trimmed muslin are more commonly seen than men attendants and if they are useful, pretty and competent they add to the eclat of the occasion.

The hostess wears her handsomest reception gown, with a neck filled in with a lace gimp, and her costume set off by some fine jewel. She likewise carries a fluffy parasol and wears long, white gloves, but since she is upon her own domain she is not supposed to wear a hat. The women guests appear in what is known as "garden party" dress—gowns in thin materials and in pale colors or white, made smarter with bewildering sunshades, flower-festooned headgear and bodice bouquets.

More scope is allowed the man guest, for though a frock coat and silk hat is the prescribed regalia, varying flannels and straw hats are equally permissible. In fact, masculine dress is a good deal affected by the weather, and at the present moment an appropriate lawn tea toilet for a young man would be white duck trousers, a blue serge sack coat, white waistcoat and vest, and a white or colored linen shirt. On no occasion is it permissible for a man to appear at a lawn tea in what is known as an outing shirt—the unstarched thing with soft collar—as politeness demands a high band or turn-over collar.

There is no set hour for the bite and sup. Whenever a girl gets hungry she strolls off to the luscious creature she happens to have in tow at the time and nibbles her sandwich, salad or ice, or sips punch, lemonade, iced tea or lemonade. The escort takes the place from the lady's attendant and serves the lady himself, spreading the napkin offered over her dress before presenting the food or beverage.

As each guest arrives the hostess greets her with a handshake and a few choice words and polishes out the refreshment booth or veranda table with refreshments. And during all the afternoon she tries to divide her attention impartially, neglecting nobody, yet giving no single person too much of her time.

When the function is over guests who have stayed till the last express their pleasure in the occasion with a few polite words to the host and hostess and then go for their wraps, which have been left in a lower room of the house. But those who depart early had better go without this adieu as a good-bye in the middle of the festivity is always something of a wet blanket.

The unwritten chapter in the book of breeding presents two serious perils for the lawn tea. The one which concerns the hostess is that it is the worst of possible taste to splurge beyond her means, or to attempt social elegance in which she has not schooled herself. As for the guests, both man and maid owe their entire allegiance to the wishes of the hostess, and each is in duty bound to do as much as is in his power to make the affair go off with smoothness and dignity.

There must be no flirtatious whispering upon benches or wandering away of bored couples, eager only to escape the heat of the sun. The one another's scorn or derisive laugh belongs to the whole company—and, above all, to the hostess, who is anxious to have her hours of simulated Arcadia pass with comfort and beauty.
